

Don't Miss Out On This Quick Win To Improve Employee Engagement By 47%

Employee engagement is at an all-time low. This isn't a country, region or sector-specific problem - it's affecting all organisations across the globe and it's been at the top of most HR agendas for a while now. So what are we doing about it?

The easy way out is to pay lip service to the issue and point the finger at troubling economic and political issues like Brexit or the 'Trump effect' and other volatile and complex issues that are beyond our control. Or, we could look inwards and start thinking about what we CAN do to reverse the problem.

It doesn't have to be this way.

If you knew that you could take one action to improve employee engagement in your organisation right now, by 47%, would you do it?

So why aren't you? What's stopping you? Maybe you recognise some of these objections:

- "It takes too long to change people"
- "People just don't communicate"
- "We haven't got the budget"
- "We haven't got the right people"
- "Our leadership team isn't on board"
- "We've tried before and it didn't work"
- "We are going through a lot of change already"
- "The company culture will never change"
- "Our managers don't know what else to do"
- "People keep leaving"

We can often get trapped by our own limiting beliefs. If we believe that a situation is hopeless then we are less likely to take action. But, if we challenge ourselves to reframe our reality so that we believe that change is not only possible but an absolute priority we are then ready to answer the question, "What has to happen in my organisation to improve employee engagement?"
